Based in our Thessaloniki office, you will contribute to the further realisation of state-of-the-art, data driven and ground-breaking IT projects. As a software developer, you will work together with our analysts based in Belgium and team up with our developers in Greece. You will write, test and implement innovative and powerful software, develop algorithms that efficiently transform vast amounts of scientific data and the web applications to make these available to top researchers worldwide. Drawing on your experience and your team spirit, you can share and learn skills and knowledge on a variety of smaller and large projects.

Are you a dedicated .NET Developer who:
> … is well versed in Computer Sciences, an IT-professional in heart and soul?
> … is experienced in ASP.NET and C#?
> … has knowledge of SQL, XML, CSS and web APIs? (XSL, JavaScript experience is a plus)
> ... has an analytic mind capable of adapting to multiple user environments and an affinity for the integration of databases and applications?
> … has interest in AI, Machine Learning and/or NLP?
> … has a passion for development and internet technologies, but shares an interest in history, languages, …
> … is proficient in English; other languages are a plus?
> … is flexible, ready for self-study, diligent team player with the skills to work individually and to finish projects autonomously?

If so, we invite you to unleash your creativity and talents in this exciting position.

What can you expect?
Brepols Publishing Services EPE offers you a challenging job in a unique international environment at the crossroads of culture, science and technology.
